THE OFFER

Step 1 — Program Diagnostic

A fixed-scope review, about two weeks. The usual starting point — it ends with written findings you can act on, with me or without me.

- Site visits and structured interviews with leadership, staff and young people
- Reach analysis — who the program reaches, who it misses, and where young people disengage
- A written findings memo in plain language, and a readout session to decide next steps

Step 2 — Advisory Engagement

The full engagement, in four stages over 8–12 weeks, with a results review at day 90: discovery and program assessment; a written, board-ready redesign strategy — staffing, scheduling and program-model changes in plain language; implementation support, two working sessions a month; and the day-90 review of what moved and what did not.

> How it starts: Enquiry → 30-minute scoping call → fixed-scope written proposal, with the full fee in writing → agreed start window. Nothing is confirmed until the proposal is agreed by both of us.

WHAT ORGANISERS SAY

> "I wanted to send a huge thank you for coming to the FUEL event last week — and for hosting a roundtable. We have had great feedback about the event and I was so happy that you were a part of it."

Erica Procter, Founder & Executive Director, FUEL (Fuel Change) — July 2023

THE RECORD — THROUGH THE GOOD GUIDES

Swabir founded The Good Guides in Scarborough in 2020 and built it unpaid alongside a full-time career as a Director of Security; it has operated on steady funding since 2023 and now runs with a team of 20, delivering mentorship, youth leadership and violence-prevention programming for young people aged 11–18, through schools and cohorts across Toronto. It is the operating record this advisory work draws on — one he is accountable for, not a model studied from outside.

WHO THIS IS FOR

Institutions — schools, municipalities, funders and youth-serving organisations — whose mentoring or youth programs are losing the young people they exist to reach. Not offered to current funders or delivery partners of The Good Guides, and not crisis cover or front-line staffing.
